EDITORIAL NOTES

Caldara's setting of Crucifixus for sixteen voices is something of an enigma. It exists in very few manuscript sources, all dating from the 19th century. It was first published in Berlin in 1840 (ed. G. W. Teschner), and the work was eventually included in an anthology of Caldara's sacred music: volume 26 of the Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Österreich, edited by Eusebius Mandyczewski in 1906. Caldara wrote over a hundred masses and individual Credo settings, and this Crucifixus cannot be found in any of them. Because of its mysterious origins, some doubt whether the work is actually by Caldara.

However, on the reasonable assumption that the work was composed as a part of a Credo, one possibility for the origin of Caldara's Crucifixus presents itself. An autograph manuscript of a concertato Credo by Caldara exists, written in Venice, in 1707. The material is bound as a booklet, with sheets folded and gathered together. Crucially, the middle sheet, which contains a Crucifixus for solo Soprano, has been shown to be a replacement (though also in Caldara's hand). This middle sheet is hurriedly written on different paper from the remainder, and only two of the four pages on the sheet are used, leaving the last two blank, before the Et resurrexit on the original gathering. Could the 16-part setting have been on the original sheets?

There is something to recommend this hypothesis. Firstly, the music of both Crucifixus settings is based on a tonal centre of A minor.

Secondly, this structural form of an expanded choir and tacet strings for the Crucifixus has parallels in other Credo settings by Caldara's Venetian contemporaries. Most notably Caldara's colleague, friend and fellow student of Legrenzi: Antonio Lotti, who wrote two Credo settings for four voices with strings, which then expand to larger-sized choirs of eight or ten voices for the Crucifixus, at which point the strings remain silent, returning for the Presto Et resurrexit. There are many other similarities of structure between these composers' Credo settings. Like Caldara, Lotti's Crucifixus settings found fame in 19th-century compilations of antique motets.

Caldara's original Credo manuscript is written on sheets lined with 16 staves: this would be just enough for the vocal parts of the Crucifixus, and perhaps, as is sometimes seen in manuscripts, the lowest bass voice would contain figures and additional notes for the organ.

Any choral director will appreciate the possibility that not enough singers were available to perform the 16-part Crucifixus, and so a reduced setting was needed; a single voice with accompaniment could be quickly written and inserted.

At the very least, we satisfy Occam's law of parsimony by marrying a Credo lacking its original Crucifixus with a Crucifixus that lacks its place in a Credo.

An edition of Caldara's Credo in C, with the Crucifixus for sixteen voices 'restored in its original place', is available from Ancient Groove Music.

The underlay does not agree between all three sources, though 1 and 2 concur more often than 3. The underlay is therefore a conflation of the three sources, favouring consistency in imitative points and complete expansion of textual phrases.

The right hand of the keyboard part has been realised from the basso seguente organ line. All other editorial contributions are in brackets.

The musical score is arranged in four systems. Each system contains four vocal staves (Soprano, Alto, Tenor, Bass) and a piano accompaniment at the bottom. The lyrics are written below the vocal staves. The piano part consists of chords and arpeggiated figures. The key signature is one sharp (F#) and the time signature is 4/4. The score includes measure numbers 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, and 10.
